SWORN STATEMENT OF LARA DEEB, PH.D.

1. I am Lara Deeb, Ph.D. I am the Chair of the Department of Anthropology and Associate Professor of Anthropology at Scripps College, which is one of the Claremont Colleges in Claremont, California. My curriculum vita is attached as Exhibit A to this sworn statement. Among other articles, I am the author of "Hizbullah: A Primer." Middle East Report Online, July 31, 2006. (<http://www.merip.org>) and a book published by Princeton University Press in 2006, titled An Enchanted Modern: Gender and Public Piety in Shi'i Lebanon.
2. I have spent extended time in Lebanon, and particularly in the southern suburbs of Beirut (which includes the neighborhood of Bourj el-Barajneh), during which I conducted original ethnographic research in the Shi'a Lebanese community there. I submit this sworn statement based on my personal knowledge based upon this field research in Lebanon.
3. It is important to clarify the relationship between Sayyid Muhammad Hussein Fadlallah and Hezbollah. (I would note that the use of the honorific "Sheikh" is incorrect. Fadlallah, who recently died, was a Sayyid, not a Sheikh. There are important differences.) Sayyid Fadlallah was considered a marja' al-taqlid, which means "source of emulation." This means that he was one of the Shi'a Muslim clerics who attained a rank high enough such that lay people might choose to follow his fatwas (religious opinions) as guidance. There are several of these clerics in the world. In Lebanon, the three most popular are Sayyid Ali al-Husayni Sistani (who lives in Iraq), Sayyid Ali Khamenei (the Iranian leader), and while still alive, Sayyid Fadlallah.
4. All Shi'a are free to choose whomever they want to follow, including Hezbollah members. Hezbollah officially follows the fatwas of Sayyid Ali Khamenei, but its members may choose anyone, and some did and do choose to follow Fadlallah. (Many Shi'a clerics state that it is possible to continue to follow someone after his death provided that one began to follow that person while he was still alive). This means that Fadlallah was one of the spiritual leaders for individual Shi'a members of Hezbollah, and an important religious figure in the Lebanese

Shi'a community. However, he was not formally or officially linked to Hezbollah or any other political party.

5. There have been times in the past few decades when he and Hezbollah disagreed significantly, most critically on the legitimacy of the idea of "rule of the jurisprudent," which unifies religious and political authority and is the system of government that Khomeyni set up in Iran. Fadlallah disagreed with this idea and did not support this form of government.
6. One cannot conclude that because a Shi'a Lebanese chose to follow Fadlallah's fatwas or communicated with him or his office that the person is a senior member of Hezbollah.
7. It is also important to clarify the issue of Fadlallah's accessibility to his followers. All "sources of emulation" in Lebanon have juristic offices. Lay people may visit, call, or email these offices with their questions. They also maintain websites where their fatwas are posted, and where people may submit questions. Fadlallah's offices were staffed by people who are able to accurately convey his religious opinions. Although Fadlallah lived under security, he was also renowned as a religious leader who was in touch with the people and their daily problems and lives. While he was in decent health, it was possible for any of his followers to request an appointment with him, either in person or on the telephone. At times, he also held open office hours during which he would meet with followers who had questions. Contact with him was not limited to the powerful. The fact of personal communication with him would not support any conclusion about whether that person was associated with Hezbollah.
8. The large famous mosque that Fadlallah built and where he preached is actually called al-Hasanayn Mosque and it is located in Haret Hrayk, the neighborhood next to Bourj el-Barajneh.
9. There are a number of excellent academic publications about Fadlallah and Hezbollah that may be useful:
 - Undoubtedly the most respected expert on Hezbollah in the United States is Augustus Richard Norton, former U.S. military turned political anthropologist. His peer-reviewed publications include:
 - Norton, Augustus Richard (1987). Amal and the Shi'a: Struggle for the Soul of Lebanon, Austin: University of Texas Press.
 - Norton, Augustus Richard. (1999). Hizballah of Lebanon: Extremist ideals vs. mundane politics. New York: Council on Foreign Relations.
 - Norton, Augustus Richard. (2007). Hezbollah, Princeton: Princeton University Press.

- Other excellent scholarly work on Hezbollah includes the following peer-reviewed articles and books:
 - Harb, Mona, "Faith-Based Organizations as Effective Development Partners?: Hizbullah and Post-War Reconstruction in Lebanon." In Faith Matters: Civil Society, Development and the Complex World of Faith-Based Organizations. p.214-239. (Ed., G. Clarke and M. Jennings. London: Palgrave, 2007).
 - Harb, Mona and Leenders, Reinoud, "Know thy enemy: Hizbullah, 'terrorism' and the politics of perception," Third World Quarterly, Vol. 26, No. 1, 2005, pp 173-197.

 - Saad-Ghorayeb, Amal. Hizb'ullah: Politics and religion. London: Pluto Press, 2002.
- The following set of articles are all excellent peer-reviewed academic articles and chapters on Fadlallah and on what it means to be a marja' al-taqlid:
 - Special Issue dedicated to Sayyid M. H. Fadlallah. Journal of Shi'a Islamic Studies. Autumn 2010, Volume III, Issue 4. This is an entire issue of an academic journal containing articles and reviews about Fadlallah.
